

Dear Chief George Holem,

I am happy to report that little Harry has shown a lot of improvement since Christmas holidays. His shadow aid agrees that he is calmer lately and it is improving our ability to help him get the best out of his schooling. He is still having some troubles making friends, but he has become close to one of the other boys in his class and they are playing really well together.

We have been spending a lot of time helping Harry learn to read. I feel that Harry will need some additional supports outside of school for him to progress in his studies. When he gets frustrated he can cause a scene within the class, which disrupts other students. I would recommend Harry do an additional hour of reading on school-nights and during weekends. Without this consistency, he forgets what he has learned and Monday mornings have proven to be the hardest. With this extra help, I feel we will see even more improvements in Harry's abilities.

I would like to wish you all the best to your family, and I look forward to meeting with you on the next Parent Teacher night.

In friendship,
